

My opinion,

I believe that allowing larger companies to not sell or deny selling of broadband services to independent ISP's would be devastating to people. We need to ensure that we have a choice on who our provider is along with the services they offer. I have had 100x better services with smaller independent ISP's than larger ones. I prefer the people who care about their customers and show it. Along the same lines a lot of larger companies refuse to still service smaller areas because it doesn't benefit them financially. The small ISP's take up the slack of the larger companies and offer us a nice alternative to the stale atmosphere, services and personality of larger companies. Please keep the companies like BellSouth regulated and in check. We need to have a fighting chance as a consumer to have a choice in the services we purchase. Please continue to regulate them and help us have that choice.

Thank you,

David Herod
